

I bought this Toyota Tacoma pickup in the spring of 2013. Since I retired, I have not been going back and forth to Amherst every day. And as a result of that, the truck has not gone very many miles. When I get the oil changed, the guys at the shop laugh at me. “Are you actually driving this thing?” they ask. I think it’s a pretty nice truck – in some ways superior to the Chevys and Fords that I drove for many years.
