OVERVIEW:

Welcome to History 101, Western Thought since 1600. During the next fifteen weeks, we will survey the history of Europe from the Scientific Revolution to the present day. The purpose of this class is to look back on the past 400+ years and analyze how Western society developed in order to better understand phenomena such as revolution, romanticism, nationalism, industrialization, war, and other related themes. Of these themes, nationalism will serve as a connective tissue running throughout the course as we investigate the different ways in which it has been expressed and how it has functioned in different contexts, the impact that it has had in different areas, and the way in which it has interacted with and influenced other important ideologies.

Through lectures and weekly reading assignments, you will be introduced to some of the major social, political, intellectual, and cultural forces and institutions that have shaped the course of Western thought. You will meet "great" and "ordinary" people who both reflected and shaped the West.

The period covered by the course is vast, and the sheer mass of detail threatens to become overwhelming, but you should take comfort in the knowledge that you're not expected to memorize and understand an infinite number of isolated facts. The details that illuminate our major themes are the ones that require your most careful attention. Naturally, in a class that spans such a broad time period, there is a limit to just how much we can cover as well as how deeply we can delve into any one subject. There will be some issues that you would rather see covered in more depth, while others of you would prefer that I skip some of the ones that I do, in fact, cover. Hopefully, though, you will find enough here that interests you (and maybe discover some new areas to which you had previously not given much thought) to make this learning experience a valuable and enjoyable one.

GOALS:

From this class you should gain a better understanding of the development of Western Thought and therefore a better understanding of the historical path that has contributed to a solid (albeit diverse) set of shared ideals. Equally important, however, this course aims to develop your ability to think critically – to read and think about complex historical issues beyond the simple facts of the case. Certainly the facts are important, and the exams and papers will make sure that you are learning them. But beyond that, you will learn to think like an historian, trying to understand not only the ‘what’ of history, but also the ‘why’. You will then need to be able to express your views and interpretations in a clear, logical, and readable manner. Working with primary sources is a critical feature of this course. The reading load is rather heavy, but it is necessary in order to have you engage the past actively and to expose you to a wide variety of intellectual ideas and viewpoints.

EXPECTATIONS:

To succeed in this class you will need to keep up with the reading, participate actively in class discussions, and be prepared for exams on the specified dates. If at any time you are having difficulties with the material or the assignments, or just need to talk, please do not hesitate to contact your Teaching Assistant or come see me during office hours.

Attendance: I expect you to be here. You will do yourself a great disservice by not attending class – you will miss material and interpretations from that day’s presentation as well as the opportunity to ask questions and otherwise interact with your classmates – an important part of the learning process. There are occasionally good reasons to miss class (religious holidays, medical mishaps, family emergencies, athletic & musical contests); you do not need to keep me or your TA informed of the details. However, if you miss more than three (3) discussion sections, your final grade will drop one full letter. If you miss more than five (5) discussion sections, I strongly suggest you drop the course, because otherwise you will fail automatically. This is only reasonable: why should you earn college credit if you miss a substantial portion of the semester?

Conduct in class: You may drink any non-alcoholic beverage that suits your fancy. Please refrain from eating and from chewing tobacco. Also, turn off cell phones and other electronic messaging devices before class.

Laptops may be used for the sole purpose of taking notes in class. Any other use (such as instant messaging, emailing, surfing the web or like activities) will cause you to lose this privilege.

Special needs: The University of Massachusetts is firmly dedicated to making a college education available to all students with the appropriate academic preparation, regardless of physical or other conditions. If you are entitled to special arrangements in order to fulfill the course requirements, please bring verification from the Office of Disabilities within the first two weeks of class.

Plagiarism and Academic Honesty:

As a condition of continued enrollment in this course, you agree to submit all assignments to the Turnitin.com service for textual comparison or originality review for the detection of possible plagiarism. All submitted assignments will be included in the UMass Amherst dedicated databases of assignments at Turnitin.com. These databases of assignments will be used solely for the purpose of detecting possible plagiarism during the grading process and during this term and in the future.

To access Turnitin.com go to the main login page (http://www.turnitin.com/login\_page.asp) and either login (if you already have an account) or click on "New User" at the top of the page. This service is free, but you do need to register. Once you are logged in, you will need to add the course to your account. Each TA has a separate Class IDs that you will need to enter. For Erika Arthur's sections, enter 2852655 and for Justin Silvestri's sections enter 2852656. The password is the same for all sections = westernciv (written in small case and one word). What is Plagiarism? According to the UMASS Academic Regulations (2008-2009) Plagiarism is defined as “knowingly representing the words or ideas of another as one's own work in any academic exercise. This includes submitting without citation, in whole or in part, prewritten term papers of another or the research of another, including but not limited to commercial vendors who sell or distribute such materials.” For more info please see the "Preventing Plagiarism" website at <http://www.umass.edu/academichonesty>.

Honesty: You may not engage in any form of academic dishonesty. This includes, but is not limited to, cheating on exams, helping another person cheat, or plagiarizing on written assignments. This also includes fabricating excuses for absences from class and signing in for another student. If you are caught cheating at any point during the semester, you will fail the entire course and I report you to the Academic Honesty Board.

Writing Center:

The university offers a special resource for students who want some additional assistance with writing and research. The Writing Center is located in the northwest corner of the W.E.B. DuBois Library's Learning Commons. For more information, please visit the WC Website: <http://www.umass.edu/writingcenter>. The web site also offers information about the Center, such as current hours of operation and what to bring with you for your first consultation.

READINGS:

The readings for this course have been chosen to compliment the lectures – they are no substitute. For the most part they are intended to illuminate one or more perspectives on a particular issue. You will discuss the books or readings in discussion sections that meet each Friday with one of the Teaching Assistants. On those days you are to come prepared to discuss the material you have read. The Textbook readings (from Coffin & Stacey's Western Civilizations are assigned for each week. Reading the textbook sections prior to class will help you follow the lecture much easier. Please complete all assigned reading prior to attending class. You are responsible for material presented both in class and in the assigned readings.
